Gary Hunter

Partner

Gary Hunter is a partner at Holtzman Vogel, where he maintains a broad governmental law practice with emphasis on state government affairs, land use entitlements, property rights advocacy and environmental issues.

In over three decades of practice in Florida, Gary has represented Florida's largest landowners in complex land use strategic development, litigation, and large area planning. He has been equally privileged to represent everyday landowners in protecting property rights from regulatory intrusion or securing needed entitlements. Gary's experience includes counseling clients through the maze of the federal Superfund and hazardous waste programs with litigation of both cost recovery actions as well as private landowner suits resulting from the migration of pollutants beyond property boundaries.

In addition to his land use and property rights expertise, Gary spends considerable hours with Florida's policymakers, both in the capital and throughout the state advocating for legislative policy on behalf of large land interests, community developers, Florida's timeshare industry, the world's largest energy company, Florida agriculture, and an international leader in the pharmaceutical industry, among others.
